Not the help that was needed, all that was given in a pamphlet and told to go on the website for further help.

Finding out about the requirements to transfer for various universities

The best part was to interact and get our questions answered about transfer requirements and related stuff. It really helped me get an idea of what that particular university is looking for.

I liked talking to the university reps and asking questions about their applications.

I spoke with the university I was wanting most to go to and had my questions answered ultimately leading me to make plans for a different university. It helped me realize that uni was not fit for me

Being able to ask people questions

getting to ask questions to university reps

There was an opportunity to ask any question you needed and the representatives did a great job of clarifying the answer for you.

Counselors know specific majors.

I learned about a school I didn't even know was a school and I learned about different ways you can "go about" the system/process. I am looking forward to getting more details information about schools that can benefit me and in my future career.

That you were able to talk to the school representatives directly and ask school specific questions

Learning about colleges

one-on-one interactions with university representatives

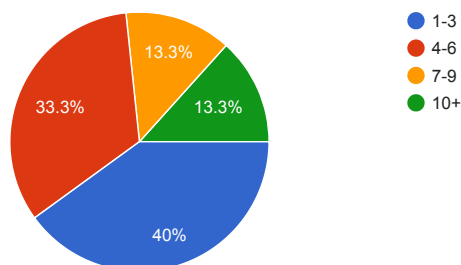

What I found beneficial was how I got to meet with college reps in person and they directed me to certain people. I also got the college reps emails and they got me in contact with the nursing program department which was easier than just visiting a website and getting lost.

On average, how many college(s)/university(ies) did you visit?

Moving it to a closed area. It was very hot in the afternoon

More volunteers and the event should be kept either early morning or when the sun goes down.

I think having more universities from out of state or private schools would be nice.

More international schools if possible

there could be more out-of-state schools

It seemed as is everything was perfect, I dont know if there can be any improvements made.

I think that the way things were structured in Fall 2022 Transfer Day were good, things seemed to flow well and students got the best out of the schools present.

It was hard to find schools when students were standing in front of the tables blocking the school name.

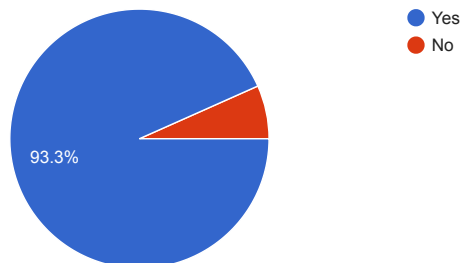

Some of the physical resources ran out near the end of the event. Students who can make it the entire time have the advantage of speaking with university representatives, and they are guaranteed to take physical resources if they wanted them. Thus, for those who can make it to Transfer Day for a short period of time (ex: 30 minutes) or cannot make it at all, each university booth resource can be saved and uploaded on Canvas or the Transfer Center webpage so that students can view these resources on their free time and do not have to worry about being unable to receive the resources.
